Raven From House Apukalypse

October 13, 2026

From the seat of judgment at House Apukalypse, to the lords, schemers, and lingering pretenders of this war:

Five weeks in and both East and West of the realm have begun to consolidate. Injuries continue to plague nearly all houses, but the season continues to shamble on.

Begin with the miracle. Waelde's Underage Grooming Academy, the house that spent four weeks failing to send word, finally sent an army. One hundred fifty-two point three two, a jump of better than eighty points from last week's shambles, and the North Augusta Gypsies were ridden down 152.32 to 122.12 despite being the favorites by six. Knight Jaylen Warren did the butchering with 36.8 when seventeen was all anyone asked of him, and Cannoneer Jason Myers lobbed 23 points' worth of iron over the walls from the siege line, which is frankly obscene work for a man whose whole job is kicking. The Gypsies will tell you — rightly — that they were robbed: Lord Drake Maye threw 39.46 points from the comfort of a bench, and Squire Kenyon Sadiq managed three-tenths of a point when nine were promised. Third straight loss, and none of them deserved.

Team marshall did not win so much as raze. One hundred fifty point one to Member Berries' 72.48 — a 77.62-point massacre, the largest of the season, and the Berries' lowest banner yet raised. Knight "The Lion of Detroit" Jahmyr Gibbs took 37.7 and the week's MVP crown, Swordsman George Pickens doubled his projection at 28, and the Shield Wall of the Jets added 18 more for sport. Member Berries got 2.2 from Knight Jeremiyah Love and little else. Three losses running now for a house that looked dangerous in September. Here's hoping the Berries' fortunes turn around soon.

Dirty Musty Steinman, our old conqueror, keeps marching: 135.26 to 109.76 over the Kegorators, with Swordsman Parker Washington continuing his breakout season for 30.4, while Swordsman Tee Higgins only could manage 4.2 for the losing side. That is five defeats in five for the Kegorators, and the cellar beneath their keep now holds enough fallen kings to seat a council. This season has been a disaster so far for the once noble Kegorators. They will need many miracles in the weeks ahead to have any hope of survival when winter comes.

House Stark continues to show why being the league's commissioner pays off well. Four straight wins now, the latest a 137.64-104.34 dismantling of Beer n Deer, and it came even though Swordsman Carnell Tate contributed a laughable 1.6 points. Knight Bucky Irving covered the gap twice over with 31.5. A house that once lost Week One by two-tenths of a point is now 4-1 and the best record in the realm. All of this score accomplished without Knight Kenneth Walker, who is set to return from rest this week. May those who face him have the gods on their side.

As for your humble narrators: we marched on The Drunk Monks, the quiet ones who hold the knife, and took the knife off them. Apukalypse Now 152.68, the Monks 93.54 — a 59.14-point rout, highest score of the week, and the Monks finished twenty-two below their own projection, their first stumble of the year. Swordsman "The Hand of Apukalypse" Puka Nacua put 37.7 on the board, while Knight David Montgomery gave the Monks a grand total of 1.1. We are 3-2 and lead the realm in points for with 656.36. Make of that what you will; we certainly have. With the Monk's loss, this ends the winning streak they had in battles since the first week. They may be down this week, but still stand as one of the top teams in the league, and are certainly not out.

In the hills, Gatlinburg Mountaineers took the Good Ole Boys 114.48 to 99.3 behind Squire Isaiah Likely's monstrous 32.4 — against Squire Harold Fannin Jr.'s 1.4 for the other side, a difference of thirty-one points at one position and the whole ballgame. Gatlinburg also saw Swordsman KC Concepcion leave the field early and not return; here's hoping the Mountaineers get good news, because 4-1 houses deserve full garrisons. Meanwhile, the Good Ole Boys loss puts them at a respectable 3-2. Only time will tell how their great house fares in the coming battles ahead.

The closest blood was spilled at Robert Dibble's gate, where Aboriginal Men escaped 114.16-106.48 — eighth-best score of the fourteen, and still a victory, which is the sort of luck that wins wars. Lord Jayden Daniels led all crowned heads with 32.26 while Swordsman CeeDee Lamb vanished for 2.9. Dibble's Swordsman Mike Evans went for 26.3 in defeat, the familiar tragedy of a hero in a losing siege. The Aboriginal Men continue their ascent in the league, a far cry from their unfortunate battles in the first month. House Dibble trudges on at 2-3, a house that may not be at the top but is certainly still within reach of the final crown.

Four houses sit at 4-1. One sits at 0-5. The rest of us scheme in the middle.

Until the ravens fly again,

House Apukalypse
