RAVEN FROM HOUSE APUKALYPSE

September 29, 2026

From the seat of judgment at Apukalypse, where the ravens come in faster than we can read them, word of the third week of war.

Begin with the quiet ones. The Drunk Monks rode north to Beer n Deer as the underdogs by ten and left with the hall in ashes, 121.94 to 104.08. They did it without their sword arm — Knight Jonathan Taylor was promised twenty and delivered nine — and it did not matter one bit, because the Shield Wall of Minnesota tripled its billing at nineteen points and simply refused to let anyone through the gate. Three weeks, three corpses, and the Monks now sit atop the realm at 3-0 with more points scored than any house alive. The quiet ones still hold the knife.

At Gatlinburg the Mountaineers fought the bloodiest field of the week, outlasting team marshall 139.84 to 137.18 — two and a half points, the width of a blade. Understand what marshall's men accomplished and still lost: Knight "The Lion of Detroit" Jahmyr Gibbs went absolutely berserk for 41.4, the single finest performance in the realm this week and a season's worth of terror packed into one afternoon. But the Eagles Shield Wall marched out and came back with minus one point — not zero, minus one, an achievement in negative valor — and that, in a two-point war, is the whole story. Gatlinburg climbed 54 points from last week's showing, the largest surge in the league, and Cannoneer Harrison Mevis put sixteen through the walls from range. The Lion deserved better than 1-2.

Robert Dibble learned what many have learned: never trust the odds-makers. Favored by seven, he was carved open 139.08 to 91.74, the week's great slaughter. Lord Brock Purdy threw for 31.28 and Swordsman Drake London answered every call with 28.4, and Dirty Musty Steinman did it while Swordsman Tetairoa McMillan contributed a grand total of 3.7. Dibble also watched Swordsman Mike Evans leave the field in the second quarter and never come back — here's hoping the raven brings better news than the day did.

The Good Ole Boys remain 3-0 after putting Waelde's Underage Grooming Academy to the sword 115.72 to 88.44, and for once we cannot mock the Academy for failing to send word — they sent quite a lot of it, all of it grim. Knight De'Von Achane limped off in the first quarter with 1.7 points to his name, now declared out for the season, and the Academy fights on at 0-3 with the realm's thinnest hope of the playoffs. Battle injuries and unfortunate luck continue to haunt this house. Squire Harold Fannin Jr. more than doubled his projection at 24.1 for the Boys, while Swordsman Deebo Samuel Sr. took this week's Gamecock honors with 15.4.

The curse has finally been broken for House Aboriginal Men. The Aboriginal Men, strong and luckless through two weeks, were projected to lose by fifteen and instead trampled the North Augusta Gypsies 120.18 to 81.16. Squire George Kittle doubled his number at 26.2. The Gypsies, one of our four horsemen, fell 48 points off last week's pace and 42 below projection — the worst showing in the realm — with Lord Drake Maye managing a paltry 3.76 and Knight Breece Hall leaving in the fourth. Only rookie Squire Kenyon Sadiq, with 23.5 out of nowhere, kept the banners upright at all.

House Stark, whose Week One heartbreak now seems long ago, took 135.92 to Member Berries' 125.36 behind Swordsman "The Winter Hawk" Jaxon Smith-Njigba and his 35.36 — the top wideout in the league this week and the top scorer in the realm for the season entire. The Berries fought well; Swordsman Michael Wilson more than doubled his projection at 25.9 and Knight Jadarian Price answered with 1.2, which is the arithmetic of a ten-point loss. And once more Stark's bench mocked us all, Lord Bo Nix sitting out 24.14 points in the cold.

Which leaves us. Apukalypse Now took the Kegorators 107.04 to 104.82 and we will not pretend it was artistry — ninth in scoring, two points of daylight, the luckiest win in the realm and we shall drink to it anyway. The Kegorators have now lost a third battle in three weeks: Squire Brock Bowers gave them 27.6 on his triumphant return, but Knight Saquon Barkley only managed to give them a measly nine, and 0-3 is a bitter drink indeed.

Sharpen what you have. Winter is not waiting on you.
